Zeng Chuanxing - Blue Paper Bride, oil on canvas, 75 x 150 cm

Contemporary Chinese artist Zeng Chuanxing is a master of realism. Born in one of China's remoter regions, Longchang County, Sichuan Province, Zeng draws influence from his minority roots. Many of his female models are from minority areas, he paints them in the classical tradition of painting with stunning detail. Zeng favours this style of painting over other modes of expression for it's ability to serve as a window to understanding other people's

Zeng is best known for his Paper Brides series, which depict the fragility and uncertainty of the institution of marriage in present-day China. Traditionally the Chinese marriage was strictly arranged, and Skip to Main Content divorce forbidden. Following Chairman Mao's encouragement of a somewhat more equal division of responsibilities and duties between male and female, and the influx

Zeng's quiet, pensive figures, draped in delicate paper gowns represent the fragility of this once impenetrable bond and reflect the often melancholic and insecure state he sees in the new generation of Chinese women.
